

Biography Landing Page

Jane Austen

1775 - 1817
author

Table of Contents

Learn More About

Image Gallery

Timeline

Subject's name, years lived, occupation and links to the Biography's main sections

Links to chapters in the Biography

Jane Austen's romantic fiction, such as Sense and Sensibility and Emma, offers biting social commentary.

Table of Contents

- A New Novel by a Lady
She had an excellent heart; her disposition was affectionate, and her feelings were strong; but she knew how to govern them. —Sense and Sensibility On October 31, 1811, an advertisement appeared l...
- An Early Education
The winter of 1775 was marked by harsh weather in southern England. Snow and ice made travel difficult, and by three in the afternoon darkness had fallen. The news was equally harsh; the American colo...
- Family Life
Jane had enjoyed the Abbey School, but was happy to be home again in Steventon. Once more she could enjoy long walks along the winding roads that dotted the village or through the fields where the Aus...
- Joining Society
In the late eighteenth century, young ladies were expected to take their place in society (or "come out," as the transition was then described) at around the age of sixteen. Jane was no exception, alt...
- A Writing Life
A few months after Tom Lefroy's departure and the end of Jane's romance, her father decided that he would no longer teach students at Steventon. Suddenly, many of the tasks that had occupied much of ...
- Leaving Home
By late 1800, Austen had settled into a comfortable routine. The trial of Mrs. Leigh-Perrot ended happily, and Austen had spent several months enjoying her home life and visiting friends. She was near...
- Home at Last
Austen and her mother were the first to settle into their new home at Chawton Cottage, arriving in July of 1809. Martha Lloyd, the sister of James' wife Mary and an old family friend, had by now becom...

↑ Return to Top

Links to more Biographies in the same collection

Learn more about...

- Earning Money
- Steventon Church
- Relative Comments
- Marriage and Money
- The Town of Bath
- ... View all

Links to additional articles about related topics

Image Gallery

... Go to gallery

Link to a gallery of images from the Biography

Timeline

1775

Jane Austen is born in Steventon, England on December 16.

1785-1786

Attends Abbey School in Reading, England.

...more

Link to a Timeline of major events in the subject's life

More from the Collection: Who Wrote That

Louisa May Alcott 1832 - 1888 author	Jane Austen 1775 - 1817 author	Avi 1937 - present author	L. Frank Baum 1856 - 1919 author	Judy Blume 1938 - present author	Ray Bradbury 1920 - 2012 author